

RENDERINGS

3D modeling as a tool can be used to assist McGregor Design Group's clients envision a proposed architectural interior design; before the space construction commences.

A walk-through capacity or photo-realistic renderings of a project can help illustrate the composition of a space, by displaying different materials, textures and lighting. It is sometimes worth the investment to re-assure an organization, before approvals are provided to proceed with implementation.